LIFE SPEAKS ART EXHIBITION

Dallas, TX—April 7, 2003-- GreenHouse Studio, an original art design studio, presents original works of art by emerging Texas artist Sandra Florez.

Texas visual artist, Sandra Florez will participate in an exhibition titled: LIFE SPEAKS at Agora Gallery in New York City, NY. The exhibition will run April 18th – May 8th, 2003.

GreenHouse Studio is where the creations, energy, and passions of artist Sandra Florez merge. So it's no surprise that she is exploring the forms of flowers in her current work. Each image represents a flower form, from "Colorful Callas" and blue "Delphiniums" to passionate "Fire flowers" and elegant "Orchids" – all with Florez's signature Latin flair. These images reflect the balance between individuality and collective power. Florez's artwork also echoes the symbolic role of flowers in society. Flowers are used to communicate our most profound emotions to one another; they serve as heralds of the seasons. One becomes keenly aware of the cycle of life as you observe flowers – budding, then brilliant, heavy with perfection as they wither slowly with seeming intent. The beauty of her flowers celebrates glorious life while subtly reminding us of the fleeting nature of our own existence. Florez says, "I am unknowing today of where my own exploration of beauty will take me, but I look to flowers as graceful guides on that journey.

Sandra is a formally trained visual artist from Texas and has currently been continuing her visual work through painting. She has been selected for group exhibitions in Texas, Chicago, SOHO NY.
